To whom it may concern:

I am pleased to recommend Iván López Mata, whom I had the honor of tutoring academically for two years. Although I am no longer his academic tutor, I continue to serve as the faculty advisor for the student chapter he promoted. Mr. López Mata has consistently demonstrated a strong desire not only to better himself but also to improve the environment around him. He understands that enhancing his surroundings contributes to his own growth, a reflection of his character and leadership potential.

Mr. López Mata's charisma and positive attitude are exceptional. He approaches challenges in a thoughtful and unique manner, always seeking the silver lining in difficult situations. This mindset allows him to overcome obstacles and inspires those around him to remain optimistic and resilient. One of his greatest strengths is his ability to connect with others. He initiated the founding of the student chapter at our institution, successfully convincing his peers of the benefits it would bring to our community.

In his academic journey, Mr. López Mata has forged his own path in Theoretical Chemistry, being an active student in this field at our university. He has also collaborated with other universities in Mexico and completed an internship in Germany, showcasing both his initiative and ambition.

I am confident that Iván López Mata will make a meaningful contribution through his participation in the ACS Leadership Institute. This opportunity will allow him to connect with other leaders who may have faced similar challenges in their roles. His participation in this institute will provide him with the support and network he needs to further grow as a leader.

Please feel free to contact me for any additional information.
